HISUTE ADORNMENT.

The Wonders of Whiskers--The Mutton Chop, the Dove-Tail, the Artist, and the Invaluable Dude.

In conversation with the "prince of barbers" it was learned that more money has been spent in the two years past in the effort to create novelties in whiskers, moustaches, goatees and imperials than would be necessary to pay the running expenses of the city.

"Give me a few of the names of whisker fashions, please?"

"Well, let me see. There are so many I scarce know where to begin. Peabody, the 'English mutton-chop,' is the most common among gentlemen of fashion. They are so cut as to give a clear view of the chin, and are worn not only by the English and persons who have spent some time in England, but by those who have very fat and florid faces.

They give a man an air of respectability. Then there is the 'dove-tail' whisker, so called because of its expansion at the end. The hair is cut close to the sides of the face, but its growth below the chin is encouraged. This style is worn a great deal by cashiers and bank presidents, and is supposed to indicate the possession of wealth.

"Then there is the 'McCauley' whisker, named in honor of the Scotch mutton-chop, and is worn long and is parted in the center, giving to the wearer the appearance of nobility. When cultivated to its highest perfection it is exceedingly becoming, and never fails to attract attention in a high way."

It is only patronized by those having light hair and soft blue eyes, and possesses a peculiar charm for the ladies.

"The 'Alexis' whisker is a very peculiar, too. It is common to Fifth Avenue and West Fourth street. Its peculiarity is an inward curl at the end. To give full effect to this style low neck shirts are indispensable."

"The 'barber' whisker is noted for its irregularity, particularly suggestive of mental pre-occupation. It is cultivated carefully to represent the most abandoned carelessness--such as might be expected in persons of artistic taste."

"The 'Bengal' whisker is a ferocious-looking appendage. It is long and shaggy, the sort of whisker that a man finds it difficult to keep out of his soup. It is most frequently encountered in the saloons, and it is generally worn by gentlemen who entertain advanced notions of political economy."

"The 'horsey' whisker is a little close-cropped affair, high up on the jaw near the ear. It is closely allied to the County Antrim whisker, which is like a little frill under the ear. Both are often bright red. With the 'Dude' whisker you are, of course, familiar. There is very little of it, and the only evidence of its growth are very painful to witness, especially to barbers."

"Got any more?"

"Oh, yes, I must leave out the 'crank' whisker. The crank insists on having his whisker combed the reverse way, until you can't tell where the whisker ends and the hair begins. As a rule, this style is followed by inventors and persons of doubtful musical knowledge."

Tom Thumb and the Burglars.

Cincinnati, Aug. 29.

Tom Thumb was a brave little man. He had lots of presents in his pretty house in one of the prettiest of the New England towns, and some of these presents were most valuable. There was a snuff-box from Prince Albert, the husband of Queen Victoria, presented to Tom Thumb when he was shown to the court at Windsor. This he prized very highly, as well as a number of other elegant things which were given him by the nobility and gentry of Great Britain. On one occasion the knowledge that he kept these articles in his house excited the undisciplined envy of a party of burglars, who thought that they would have an easy job with the small family. Tom was awakened at dead of night to the knowledge that burglars were in the lower rooms. His wife begged him to let the burglars search their work on the plea that his life was more valuable than all the gold and silver in the world. But the little man, who, though small in stature, had the courage of a giant, went to his bureau drawer, took out a small, hand-drawn revolver--one was the gift from the crown prince of Prussia--and crept down to the parlor, where he saw two men busy at work on a safe constructed in the wall.

"Step that," he said quietly, "or here's a bullet for each of you."

The men turned round in alarm, and almost stood a few feet off. One of them threatened him.

"If you make a step toward me I fire," said Tom, and they saw a revolver in each of his little hands.

"You're a plucky little fellow," exclaimed the other burglar, "and by the way, I'll have nothing to do with this." Then, addressing Tom: "If we go with you keep quiet!"

"I have my house," said Tom.

At this moment, Mrs. Stratton, who had come down and saw the scene, threatened all. The two burglars thought no more about it, but made a rush and scrambled out of the window. In the light of the moon they dropped a gold signet ring, which Tom was ever after proud to show as a memento of his encounter with burglars. He was never after molested.

Hints on Heredity.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

It would be well for us if we would heed in our domestic life the advice of the old cock crows, so crows the young, or according to the version of the German, "The young master crows so pater as the old cock."

There is very little in the world of the old cock's character, the sins which are bestowed upon them in their birth. "If you want to cure the boy of his disease," said Dr. Holmes, "you must begin with the fourth generation before the boy comes into the world."

"Make yourself a good man," growled Carlyle in his prime, "and you will be sure to see one or two in the world."

And in that case, it is very easy to add, you will save the use of that arch on your offspring, if had children could only turn around and give their great-grandfathers a good thrashing for transmitting evil qualities of character the right nail would be hit on the head.

The Growth of Nails.

Among the proofs that are adduced that nails are nothing more than somewhat altered parts of the skin is the fact that they are made up of the same kind of flattened scales, while the younger parts, just like the younger cells of the outer skin, are rounder and softer. But the great family furnish the best proof of all, for with the boy come into the world, the ends of the different fingers. Instances have been observed of nails growing on the stumps of amputated fingers, and when the coffin containing the corpse of the great Napoleon was opened long after his death at St. Helena his toe-nails had grown clear through his boots and his hair stuck through the chinks of the coffin.

Finger-Nails.

The old Jewish doctors entertained some queer notions in regard to finger-nails. They thought that if a man's nails were cut off, the body of the first parents were perfectly transparent, and that the nails are the only vestige left of man's estate in the Garden of Eden.

THE CHOIR INVISIBLE

[George Eliot.]

O, may I join the choir invisible

Of those immortal dead who live again

In minds made better by their presence; live

In pulses stirred to generosity,

In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn

Of miserable aims that end with self,

In thoughts sublime that pierce the night

Like stars, and with their mild persistence urge men's minds

To vaster issues.

To live in heaven:

Breaking a leaner order that controls

With growing away the growing life of man.

So we inherit that sweet purity

For which we struggled, failed and agonized.

With widening retrospect that brood despair.

Rebellious flesh that would not be subdued,

A victim patient slumber still the child.

Poor, anxious penitence is quick dissolved,

Its disorgs, quenched by meeting harmonies,

Die in the large and charitable air.

And in our rarer, better, truer self,

That subdues religiously in yearning song,

That watchful to cease the burden of the world.

Laboriously tracing what must be,

And what may yet be better--saw rather

A worthier usage for the sensory.

And shaped it forth before the multitude,

Divinely human, raising worship so

To higher reveries more mixed with love--

That better self shall live till human time

Shall fold its eyelids, and the human sky

Be gathered like a scroll within the tomb

Unread forever.

This is life to come,

Which martyred men have made more glorious

For us who strive to follow.

May I reach

That purest heaven--to other souls

The cup of strength in some great agony,

DECATUR BOY'S POCKET.

And What It Contained—A Genuine Discovery.

We are accustomed to cry out against the reckless and wasteful extravagance of the nineteenth century boy, and to see that his tendency is to squander instead of accumulate, but if anybody doubts the inclination of Young America to collect property and store it away for future use, let him scan the inventory we give below of the contents of one pocket of a Decatur boy's pantaloons. He was getting his clothes fixed up and put in order for the opening of school, and here is the inventory of what was in a single pocket:

- One pocket handkerchief.
- One bunch of corns.
- One salt tickle.
- One cork.
- One nose-chestnut.
- One brass sleeve-button.
- One brass button.
- One marble.
- One button.
- One shoe-string.
- One shoe-string—very short.
- One bottle essence of cloves.
- Another bottle.
- One piece of soapmaker's wax—for school seats.
- One sponge.
- One Sunday School Letter.
- Four axes.
- One Sunday School Leaflet.
- One package court-plaster.
- One package cotton, with dyes.
- One fancy card—"God is Love."
- One receipt for 40 cents subscription to the Daily Rep.
- Two nails.
- One horse-chestnut.
- One small hook.
- One Lucifer match.
- One short lead pencil.
- One watch key.

If that boy gets no set back he will own ten thousand miles of railroad and count his stocks and bonds by the ton before he is forty years old.

A Cripple for Life.

Dis. Case Oronoth and E. W. Moore amputated the right leg of Patrick Carlin above the knee, yesterday, and now the young man is a cripple for life. He was thrown out of a buggy northeast of the city six miles Wednesday night, and his leg was broken by the fall. He is at St. Mary's hospital where he is receiving the best of attention. His home is near Cisco in Patt county.

The African Methodists.

Bishop Ward has been presiding at the annual conference of the Illinois Methodist Ministers at Springfield this week. The churches of the conference are in debt $30,000. The appointments made by the Bishop send Rev. E. C. Joiner to De Moines; Rev. Simon to Decatur, Rev. Jackson to Jacksonville; Rev. Beckley to Quincy, and Rev. White to Peoria. A plea was devoted to lift the $30,000 indebtedness. Each minister promised to do what he could to raise a portion of the same. The next conference will be held at Bloomington.

The Library Board.

The regular meeting of the Library Board was held on Thursday. Present—Messrs. Hardy, Shandeman and Wells, Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. Haworth. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Librarian's report for July and treasurer's receipt for $11.82 were received and placed on file. The finance committee having approved the bills amounting to $32.76, vouchers were ordered issued for their payment. Receipt from Carlin & Hollenbeck for $125.42; receipt placed on file. One copy of "State Laws of 1888" received from secretary of state. One copy of "How to Study History," by County Supt. Trainer, presented by the author, received and thanks of the board returned to the author for the same. On motion adjourned.

Human Obesity.

London Times.

We recorded on Saturday the death of the "fattest man in the world," a member and special curiosity of Nathan Cleve's circus in America, who appears to have been smothered in bed. Miss Conley, though the most enormous of her sex, weighing as she did 497 pounds, fell far short of that prodigy of human bulk, the famous Daniel Lambert, who died in 1809, during Stamford fair, at the age of 40. Lambert weighed no less than 52 stone 11 pounds, that is 730 pounds, or close upon half as much again as the American lady. Daniel Lambert's coffin with his body could not be brought down the stairs of the house in which he died, and the wall at the sides of the window had to be broken away to provide an exit. He was 5 feet 11 inches in height, measured 9 feet 1 inch around the body, and 3 feet 1 inch around the leg. He never drank any beverage but water, and slept less than eight hours per day. The "Chinaman," at his stoutest, weighed only 23 stone, or less than half the weight of Daniel Lambert.

Loss of Life by the Java Eruption Increasing in Numbers.

Some of the Most Remarkable Phenomena Ever Known in the History of Volcanoes—A German Masher Ruins Two Homes—A Tyrannical Parent—The News in General.

LONDON, August 31.—Reports from Batavia received last night are of a more encouraging nature, although details of the horrors of the eruption continue to come in. Some of the most remarkable phenomena ever known in the history of volcanic eruptions have been developed by the great disturbances in Java and Sumatra. After the sudden subsidence of the territory in the kingdom of Batavia on Monday last, the people of Batavia experienced a feeling of relief in the hope that the worst had been passed. This continued until about 10 o'clock, when it gave place to renewed fears, for the craters had then once more begun to send up great masses of smoke and lava, although without the force of the former eruptions. The eruptions seem to be more violent at night than during the day. By 11 o'clock the Papandayang, which is 7,034 feet high, was in a very active state of paroxysmal activity. It was accompanied by detonations, and a few miles off a thousand miles off in Sumatra in a straight line. Three distinct columns of smoke were seen to rise from the mountain to a vast height, and its whole surface appeared as if it were covered with lava. Stones fell for miles around, and the black fragments of lava carried into the air caused total darkness. The eruption was accompanied by a strong wind, which blew from the north, and the roofs of houses, trees, and even men and horses, were blown down.

CARRIED INTO THE AIR.

The abundance of ash and cinders which was blown down from the craters of houses at Denabato to the depth of several inches. St. Joseph, Mo., August 31.—The north part of this city was terribly agitated yesterday over developments in a domestic case of the Evans family. This continued until about 10 o'clock, when it gave place to renewed fears, for the craters had then once more begun to send up great masses of smoke and lava, although without the force of the former eruptions. The eruptions seem to be more violent at night than during the day. By 11 o'clock the Papandayang, which is 7,034 feet high, was in a very active state of paroxysmal activity. It was accompanied by detonations, and a few miles off a thousand miles off in Sumatra in a straight line. Three distinct columns of smoke were seen to rise from the mountain to a vast height, and its whole surface appeared as if it were covered with lava. Stones fell for miles around, and the black fragments of lava carried into the air caused total darkness. The eruption was accompanied by a strong wind, which blew from the north, and the roofs of houses, trees, and even men and horses, were blown down.

CARRIED INTO THE AIR.

The abundance of ash and cinders which was blown down from the craters of houses at Denabato to the depth of several inches. Off Point Cay the flowing pumice upon the water formed a layer two feet thick, having the appearance of lava. The eruption was accompanied by a strong wind, which blew from the north, and the roofs of houses, trees, and even men and horses, were blown down.

THE VOLCANIC PIRRES.

though still burning, had lost most of their force, and the stream generally found a vent without being forced through the comparatively narrow mouths of the old craters. The eruption was accompanied by a strong wind, which blew from the north, and the roofs of houses, trees, and even men and horses, were blown down.

LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.

It is thought at Batavia that the estimate of 75,000 killed will not prove excessive. On the Java coast, the eruption was accompanied by a strong wind, which blew from the north, and the roofs of houses, trees, and even men and horses, were blown down.

A Social Sensation.

St. Joseph, Mo., August 31.—The north part of this city was terribly agitated yesterday over developments in a domestic case of the Evans family. Some body informed Henry Hesse, a cigar-maker, some time ago, that his wife was too intimate with Joseph Bertram, a salesman. Hesse, it is said, spoke to his wife about it, and she admitted her error, but promised to reform. Ever since that time Hesse's little girl has been crying for her mother, and the boy has been crying for his father.

J. T. HERRON, Sheldon, Ill. says: "I am selling Brown's Iron Bitters, and it gives universal satisfaction."
